Entrust America has released their latest Identity Protection and Recovery plan, the Redaction Package. Backed with guaranteed identity recovery if your identity is ever compromised, Entrust America will restore your good name from the damage

FOR IMMEDIATE RELEASE

April 8, 2010 -- Designed by police officers, Entrust America is the only Identity Theft recovery company offering Internet redaction as a tool to remove your personal information from the Internet. This is the same process used by undercover detectives for over seven years to avoid their name being associated with their home address, thus removing the ability for the bad guys to locate their residence and target them and their families at home for legal action they took while in the line of duty.

If you have you ever “Googled” or checked White Pages for your name or phone number you may have seen all of your personal information available on the internet, including a map to your home. Entrust America redaction process will help remove the connection between your name and a map to your house from Internet websites that share, sell and release your personal information. Mike, a current police officer, shared, “We don’t want others to look up where you live by checking for your name online.” With well over thirty data bases that share, rent or release personal information on the Internet, members of the Law Enforcement community are taking notice of Entrust America. A retired police officer who recently purchased the Redaction Package stated, “This is the most detail manual on how to restrict personal information from being released to the Internet. I have it now but I sure could have used it while I was working the beat. This new Internet generation of officer needs the Redaction Package.”

The redaction process has been used by federal, state and local law enforcement officers, including public safety officials to protect their families from Identity Theft and threats made against their families at home. Officers and citizens are finding out quickly that many online databases offer the ability to “Opt-Out,” but require a written request to do so.

Entrust America offers Identity Recovery and the Redaction Package which includes the pre-written letters ready to mail for as little as $129.95 for an individual and $199.95 for a family. For more information visit www.EntrustAmerica.com
